Expert in Sustainable Business Practices

Biography

Amrou Awaysheh, assistant professor of operations management, focuses on sustainable operations in his research, considering the link between sustainability activities and firm performance. "The majority of my research focuses on what firms do to make sure they're socially sustainable," said Awaysheh. "I consider the impact the firm has on individuals. For example, how does an organization treat its suppliers in a developing world? How do they make sure they don't use slave labor or child labor? How do they make sure their employees have a good work-life balance, so they can do a good job for themselves and be good for the firm? I look at the interplay between these practices and firm performance." Awaysheh received his PhD in business administration from the Richard Ivey School of Business at the University of Western Ontario. Upon graduation, Awaysheh went to work at the IE Business School in Madrid, Spain. There, he taught in the full-time MBA program as a professor of operations management, and he also served as the International Consulting Project Faculty Director. In that role, Awaysheh trained and mentored students as they provided consulting services to companies. Awaysheh has been at the Kelley School of Business on the IUPUI campus since 2014. Awaysheh was named one of the 2019 Poets & Quants Best 40 Under 40 Professors. That same year, he was named to the Indianapolis Business Journal's Forty Under 40. Awaysheh was nominated as Professor of the Year for The Economist Intelligence Unit in 2012 and was named Professor of the Week by the Financial Times in 2011.
