Biography

Anna Steffeny is President of LeaveLogic, a cloud-based platform that helps companies and their employees plan, track and manage various types of leave. Since founding LeaveLogic in 2015, she has guided the technology startup from concept, through multiple rounds of venture capital funding, to widespread rollout to employers across three countries. Unum acquired LeaveLogic in January 2018 to advance its capabilities in absence management and provide digital leave support to employers. In her current capacity as President of LeaveLogic, Steffeny works closely with the Unum products team in the strategic rollout of the leave management platform to new and existing Unum customers. A recognized thought leader in parental leave policy, she is regularly profiled in television and print media, participates in industry panels and speaking events, and has recently given a TEDx talk and participated in the White House Summit on Working Families. Steffeny has nearly 20 years of international corporate experience with companies including Microsoft and Citigroup. She holds a bachelor's degree in finance and information technology from Alfred University. Steffeny and her husband, Michael, are the proud parents of two sons and live in Seattle.
