Doctoral Faculty - School of Leadership Studies at Fielding Graduate University

Flagstaff, AZ, US

Doctoral Faculty in the School of Leadership Studies

Biography

Annabelle Nelson is a renaissance woman. She has primarily worked as a psychology professor for Prescott College and the Fielding Graduate University, but she has also walked her talk using spiritual practices in yoga and Zen meditation to expand consciousness. Blessed or cursed with a wild mind, her visions have helped set the cornerstone of her archetype wisdom model. She has traveled the world to sacred sites in India, Turkey and Japan, created a nonprofit to prevent HIV infection in youth, published psychological research on imagery and storytelling, started college programs for Native Americans, completed a Fulbright in India, and developed a nationally recognized prevention program, Storytelling for Empowerment. Directly from graduate school, Nelson worked for the Marylhurst Education Center, which was a leader in creating programs for working adults and giving college credit for experiential learning. She was a faculty member and administrator at Prescott College for 10 years, where she started the Adult Degree Program, a BA program for working adults, and the Center for Indian Bilingual Teacher Education, a teacher certification program for American Indian teacher aides living on reservations. She led the College in getting approval for its teacher education certification program from the Arizona Department of Education.
