

Catarina Fernandes

Assistant Professor of Organization & Management at Emory University, Goizueta Business School

Atlanta, GA, US

Biography

Catarina R. Fernandes joined Goizueta after completing her PhD in Organizational Behavior at Harvard University. Her research looks at how status, power, and leadership emerge in teams in organizational contexts, and how they influence behaviors and team performance. She is particularly interested in how potentially contrasting experiences of status across the different groups and contexts people belong to affect their self-perceptions, behavior, and interactions with others. Fernandes also holds a PhD and MBA from Harvard Business School and a BA in Economics from Nova School of Business & Economics in Lisbon, Portugal. Her work experience includes general management consulting and human capital consulting, in both Europe and the United States.
