Biography

Clint Edmonson is an architect evangelist for Microsoft based out of St. Louis, Missouri and the host of NotSoTrivial.net, a web site dedicated to non-trivial matters concerning aspiring and seasoned software architects working with the .NET platform. Although educated as a Mechanical Engineer, Clint has spent his entire 20 year career in software development preparing for his role as an Architect Evangelist. His experiences span many industries including utilities, education, call centers, construction, and beer brewing. When not delivering in depth discourses on software layering, he enjoys weightlifting, gaming, and photographing zoo animals.
