

Daniel Gitterman, Ph.D.

Duncan MacRae '09 and Rebecca Kyle MacRae Professor of Public Policy, College of Arts and Sciences at UNC-Chapel Hill

Chapel Hill, NC, US

Dan Gitterman is the Duncan MacRae '09 and Rebecca Kyle MacRae Professor of Public Policy.

Daniel Gitterman is the Duncan MacRae '09 and Rebecca Kyle MacRae Professor of Public Policy at UNC-Chapel Hill. He also serves as Director of the Honors Seminar in Public Policy and Global Affairs (Washington, DC) and Interim Director of EPIC. At Carolina, he has received fellowships from the Institute of Arts and Humanities (Academic Leadership Program; Chairs Leadership Program) and the Global Research Institute (inaugural program Globalization, the Economic Crisis and the Future of North Carolina). He has received the Tanner Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching and the John L. Sanders Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching and Service at Carolina. Gitterman's research interests include: the American Presidency and public policy; education and labor markets; American welfare state and politics of social and health policy, and globalization and labor standards. His latest edited volume, The Intersector: How the Public, Nonprofit, and Private Sectors Can Address America's Challenges, explores how cross-sector collaboration can solve seemingly intractable societal problems by reviewing the state of cross-sector collaborations, identifying emerging practices, and offering a range of perspectives from experts in the field. His book, Calling the Shots: The President, Executive Orders, and Public Policy, examines how Presidents and their staffs use specific tools, including executive orders and memoranda to agency heads, as instruments of political control of and influence over the government and the private sector. For more than a century, they have used these tools without violating the separation of powers. His first book, Boosting Paychecks: The Politics of Supporting America's Working Poor, also published by Brookings Institution Press, examines the role of federal income tax and minimum wage in supporting low income working families in the United States. He is co-author/editor (with Peter A. Coclanis) of A Way Forward: Building a Globally Competitive South, published by the Global Research Institute and distributed as an e-book by UNC Press. Professor Gitterman received a B.A. from Connecticut College, an M.A. from the University of Pennsylvania, and an A.M. and Ph.D. in Political Science from Brown University. Gitterman was an Exchange Scholar at the Harvard University Ph.D. program in Health Policy and completed a National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) postdoctoral fellowship at the University of California at Berkeley.

Public Policy and Practice, Domestic Policy, Social Policy, Globalization, Political Economy, Minimum Wage Policies, Low-Income & Excluded Populations, Economic Development, Health Policy, The Presidency

Brown University

M.A., Ph.D. Political Science

University of Pennsylvania

M.A. Sociology

Connecticut College

B.A. Sociology, American Politics

Order of the Long Leaf Pine

Bestowed by the Governor to North Carolina citizens in recognition of a proven record of service to the state.

John L. Sanders Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching

Awarded by The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Tanner Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching

Awarded by The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Please click here to view the full profile.

This profile was created by Expertfile.