Biography

Daniel Rodic is a part of the management team at Loose Button, where he serves as Director of Brand Partnerships, managing relationships with brands in the luxury beauty industry. Prior to Loose Button, Daniel was selected to The Next 36, where he founded DineWithMe, a mobile app that looked to disrupt the way restaurants advertise to consumers, while making it easier for users to figure out where to eat out with their friends. He also spent time at Deloitte as an Analyst in their Information and Technology Risk Solutions practice, where he worked with clients in the financial, energy and telecommunication industries. Daniel also spends time in the not-for-profit space, supporting young entrepreneurs through his role as President of the Impact Entrepreneurship Group, where he has built a nationally recognized mentorship program with Deloitte called Impact Infused. Before Impact, he also founded a not-for-profit consulting group, and sat on the Board of the Northern Secondary School Foundation, a local education-focused charity in Toronto. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto's Rotman Commerce program, earning a Bachelor of Commerce, specializing in Finance and Economics.
