Biography

Dr Fernando Morales-Martinez spent over 30 years initiating, fostering, and guiding the education of geriatric medicine in Costa Rica as well as Latin America for medical students, residents, fellows, practicing general physicians and the general public. Currently, all medical students (since 1988) and all family residents rotate through a well-established geriatric medicine section. This section has an established medical staff and a geriatric fellowship-training program of 5 years duration that Dr. Morales initiated in 1992. This fellowship training is incorporated into an extended 4-year family medicine program (1987). Training sites are at the National Hospital of Geriatrics and Gerontology in the capitol, San Jose, as well as outlying community clinics and facilities. Dr Morales is both the general director and the academic director of the Department of Medicine at this hospital. EAMA inspires the model of excellence on his academic career.
