The Media and Climate Change

Look in the dictionary to find the definition of "Media" and you will learn it is simple the plural of "Medium". Media is simply a method to deliver a message, but as new forms of media continue to evolve, it's impact on complex issues such as climate change have reached critical and never seen before levels. This in depth Keynote examines both the growth of new forms of media and how they are changing debates forever.

The Sustainability of Sustainability

As human kind attempts to push towards a sustainable lifestyle, our enthusiasm risks making the entire sustainability movement not sustainable. In this Keynote presentation, the ideas driving the sustainability movement are examined as well as the potential traps that can stop the movement cold. In addition the various motivators to propel change are discussed. This keynote involves elements of humour, inspiration and personal self discovery.

Understanding the Hats We Wear

In our multi-tasking world, people are often required to wear many "hats" in one day. From professional, to personal to social, we wear many hats depending on need. However in times of crisis, which hat do we tend to wear first? Knowing this helps us to understand how we deal with complex issues such as climate change. This insightful and inspiring Keynote is ideal for professional associations and environmental conferences.

An Environmentalist. A Dad. A Mission. A Purpose

As a father of four children, an environmental activist and a media professional with 20 years experience, Eric Novak combined his passions and expertise to launch EnviroDad.com - a resource site for parents who understand that stewardship of the environment is a critical aspect of parenting. This Keynote describes the motives behind EnviroDad and how the lessons learned can be applied by all parents.

Fighting Climate Change - The Battle for Hearts and Minds

The issue of Climate Change has evolved to where it is no longer a fight over conflicting science, but rather one that is fought through the manipulation, or spin doctoring of information. With the ultimate prize being the hearts, minds and dedication of the general public, this Keynote examines the history of using doubt as a weapon as well as how doubt can be both fought and defeated. This is an inspirational and motivating talk perfect for conferences and large events.
