A Time Management and Productivity Speaker Using Research Results to Educate and Entertain

Biography

I am a speaker, author and the president of a 20 year old management consulting firm that focuses on providing the best new thinking on time management and personal productivity to professionals anywhere in the world. Using the latest research, I provide informational and instructional speeches that engage audiences in taking their skills to the next level, regardless of their experience or knowledge. In my speeches, I give ample room for the idea that one-size-doesn't-fit-all and that prescriptions that seek to satisfy all people's needs regardless of culture, age, gender, marital status and one's volume of commitments are extremely difficult to implement. Most fail in their attempts. Taking the idea of custom time management solutions to the next level has led me to find interesting solutions in which I challenge audiences to do more than just play follow-the-guru, but instead craft their own answers to key productivity questions.
