Author of "Solving for X in the Y Domain"

Gae Walters, PhD, is an organizational psychologist and executive coach with expertise in leadership development, team effectiveness, and the behavioral sciences. She works extensively with women who hold senior leadership positions in the STEM professions, with discussions often centering on developing strategies and responses to issues of institutionalized gender bias and backlash. Dr. Walters served as the vice president of organizational development for a major worldwide hotel chain, and she is a mentor and adviser for the Society for Women in Engineering and the Women's Innovation Network. She is also the sole female member of the board of directors of a global engineering and construction firm, where she advocates for women's roles in senior leadership positions.
