The Future of Energy: What Will the Transition Look Like?

The transition to a low-carbon economy is in its very early days. The reality is that fossil fuels are still the most efficient, ubiquitous, reliable and affordable energy solutions available today. Understanding that a transformation of our energy system of this magnitude won't happen overnight. In this presentation, Greg will discuss technologies and issues that are having an impact now or are near on the horizon as we move to cleaner, smarter and attainable energy alternatives.

Corporate Venturing: The Arms Race for the Best Cleantech Opportunities

New clean technologies are crucial to helping companies reduce their energy and water use, emissions, and waste production per unit of revenue. This has led, in the words of one venture capitalist, to "an arms race for the best cleantech opportunities" with more corporations becoming interested in early-stage investments and strategic partnerships. Gain valuable insight into the future of investing in green innovations, and how companies are strategically partnering with early-stage innovators.

Vice President, Portfolio Management ? Investeco Capital Corp.

Investeco is Canada's first environmental investment company. By investing in both private and public companies in sectors like renewable energy, water, sustainable agriculture, and clean technologies we are able to tap into the growing demand for environmentally superior products and services. We believe that investing in the environmental economy helps build companies that matter, but success is providing superior returns to our investors.

Vice President, Portfolio Management ? Greenchip Financial

Greenchip was founded to manage portfolios of publicly listed companies operating globally in the environmental economy. Greenchip is 100% committed to invest only in companies that provide products and services offering solutions to environmental problems, or that improve the efficiency of natural resource use. We have compiled an impressive database and track over 600 listed companies annually. Investing with Greenchip improves the efficiency, productivity and sustainability of the economy.
