Dr. Davidson is a specialist in American Foreign and Security Policy, and International Security.

Biography

If you're interested in Italy-U.S. relations since the end of the Cold War or a vote-seeking explanation of Berlusconi's Iraq policy, look no further. Jason Davidson, professor of political science and international affairs, is a specialist in American foreign and security policy; British, French and Italian foreign and security policy; and international security. He has delivered lectures at venues such as the United States Department of State's Bureau of Intelligence and Research, the United States Marine Corps War College, the University of Rome (Roma Tre) and the University of Bologna. An award-winning professor, Dr. Davidson was the 2007 recipient of UMW's Alumni Association Outstanding Young Faculty Award and a two-time recipient of the Academic Affairs Council Professors' Appreciation Award. He was awarded a UMW Jepson Fellowship for 2005-06 for his project "Signaling Resolve in Contemporary American Foreign Policy." He is the author of two books, "The Origins of Revisionist and Status-quo States" and "America's Allies and War: Kosovo, Afghanistan, and Iraq." His articles have been published in peer-reviewed journals such as Contemporary Security Policy, Modern Italy, Security Studies and The Nonproliferation Review. Dr. Davidson has written chapters in books such as "Power in Transition: The Peaceful Change of International Order," "Sanctions as Economic Statecraft: Theory and Practice" and "Italy in the Post-Cold War Order: Adaptation, Bipartisanship, Visibility."
