Associate Professor of Biology at Southern Utah University

Cedar City, UT, US

Specializing in bat research, collegiate program development, STEM education, and professional development

Biography

Dr. John Taylor is an associate professor of biology at Southern Utah University whose research centers on the study of bats living in mines and at Utah national parks. In addition to conducting research and teaching biology courses, Dr. Taylor is assistant dean of Integrative Learning where he supervises SUU's innovative general education program, Jumpstart. Dr. Taylor also has an extensive range of service in the state of Utah, involving science education, government committees on education, and working with the National Science Teachers Association. He serves as president of the Utah Science Teachers Association, which supports more than 1,000 teacher-members, and serves as vice chairman for the Zion National Park Forever Project, an official nonprofit partner of Zion National Park. In this capacity, he helps guide the operation of philanthropic endeavors, natural history education, and the general business, supplying Zion National Park with millions in external funding for park operations. An SUU alumnus, Dr. Taylor graduated with a bachelor's degree in biology/zoology. He furthered his education earning a master's degree in zoology from Brigham Young University and a Ph.D. in science education at Syracuse University. Previously, he taught general biology courses for Utah Valley University.

Accomplishments

President of the Utah Science Teachers Association

2010-Present The Utah Science Teachers Association is a group of educators with members ranging from elementary teachers, middle school teachers, and high school teachers to university professors and members of the science industry. The organization's goal is to better science education in the state of Utah.

GE Assessment Design and Implementation

Designed and implemented a campus-wide assessment program using the CANVAS LMS. This program relied on the adoption of the AAC&U's Essential Learning Outcomes by the 150+ SUU General Education faculty. In one year's time, well over half of the faculty have successfully included the assigned ELOs into their courses and assessed the students using the new system.

Jumpstart GE

What's different about about Jumpstart? Everything. Imagine 50 students, 8 faculty, 34 credits, and 1 amazing educational experience. John Taylor designed and implemented an entire GE curriculum to become fully integrated within a one-year time span.
