

Kenneth Rosenman

Professor and Medicine Chief of the Division of Occupational and Environmental Medicine at Michigan State University

East Lansing, MI, US

Kenneth Rosenman is an expert on preventing and treating medical conditions caused by exposure to chemicals, lead, asbestos and silica

Biography

Kenneth Rosenman has an active research program in occupational and environmental disease with particular interest in pulmonary disease. In conjunction with Michigan OSHA and the Michigan Health Department, he tracks the occurrence of health issues such as work-related asthma, acute work-related traumatic fatalities, acute pesticide disease, noise-induced hearing loss, lead and mercury exposure, and asthma deaths in the young. Rosenman is a professor of medicine in the Department of Medicine at Michigan State University in the College of Human Medicine.

Industry Expertise

Writing and Editing, Education/Learning, Research

Areas of Expertise

Coronavirus, Work-related Asthma, Occupational Environmental Disease, Pulmonary Disease, COVID-19

Affiliations

American College of Epidemiology : Fellow, American College of Preventive Medicine : Fellow

Education

New York Medical College
M.D.

Cornell University
B.A. Genetics

Accomplishments

Michigan Department of Community Health Health Policy Champion Award
Michigan Department of Community Health Health Policy Champion Award in 2011

Please click here to view the full profile.

This profile was created by Expertfile.