

Mark Cole

Head of Learning & Development at Camden & Islington NHS Foundation Trust

London, , GB

Engaging innovative speaker on learning in practice

Biography

Although originally trained as a teacher, Mark's professional life has been largely spent in human resource development roles in the health care sector. Mark is especially interested in informal learning, knowledge management and organisational development. He is published on these topics in a number of academic journals. Mark is now completing a professional doctorate at the University of Greenwich, where his research is concerned with the theory and practice of professional reflection. Building on both his extensive experience and his academic studies, he also offers a learning consultancy service that uses focused and structured reflective techniques to support effective personal, professional and organisational development. He has provided opening and closing keynote addresses for a number of international health care conferences. He has also undertaken other speaking engagements at a range of professional events. He works to deliver presentations that are intelligent, amusing, engaging and provocative.

Availability

Keynote, Moderator, Panelist, Workshop, Host/MC, Corporate Training

Industry Expertise

Medical/Dental Practice, Health Care - Providers, Social Services

Areas of Expertise

Learning, Leadership, Reflective Practice

Affiliations

Member of the British Institute of Learning & Development

Sample Talks

Learning and professional practice

Learning takes place in and through practice in most professional settings. Capitalising on learning is crucial for personal and organisational effectiveness. This is how the linkages between learning and doing can be fostered.

Education

University of Greenwich
Doctorate Education

University of York
BA Politics

Please click here to view the full profile.

This profile was created by Expertfile.