

Molly Worthen, Ph.D.

Associate Professor, Department of History, College of Arts and Sciences at UNC-Chapel Hill
Chapel Hill, NC, US

Professor Worthen's research explores North American religious and intellectual history.

Molly Worthen is an associate professor of history in UNC's College of Arts and Sciences. Her research focuses on North American religious and intellectual history, particularly the ideas and culture of conservative Christianity. She is the author of the books "Apostles of Reason: The Crisis of Authority in American Evangelicalism" (Oxford University Press, 2013), and "The Man On Whom Nothing Was Lost: The Grand Strategy of Charles Hill (Houghton Mifflin, 2006.) Worthen teaches courses in global Christianity, North American religious and intellectual culture, and the history of politics and ideology. She is a contributing opinion writer for The New York Times and has also written about religion and politics for Slate, the Boston Globe, Foreign Policy and other publications. She is working on a 36-lecture course for the Teaching Company's Great Courses series, "History of Christianity II: From the Reformation to the Rise of Evangelicalism," scheduled for release in 2018.
