

Ross Garber

Adjunct Professor at Tulane University

New Orleans, LA, US

Garber is nationally-prominent impeachment law expert.

Biography

Ross Garber is an impeachment law expert who The New York Times called "arguably the nation's leading practitioner" of impeachment law. As an adjunct professor at Tulane School of Law, he teaches a course on political investigations and impeachment. He is also a CNN legal analyst who has been quoted in national media outlets across the country. Garber is a principal with The Garber Group in Washington D.C. Prior to that, he was a partner at Shipman & Goodwin, co-chairing the firm's Government Investigations and White Collar Crime Group. Among other high-profile cases, Garber represented embattled former Missouri Governor Eric Greitens, a decorated Navy SEAL and rising GOP star who resigned in late May after a scandal involving a sexual relationship with his hairdresser and allegations he misused charity funds. Garber has also represented Gov. Robert Bentley of Alabama, Gov. Mark Sanford of South Carolina and Gov. John Rowland of Connecticut when they faced investigations or impeachments.

Areas of Expertise
